A point spread is a bet on the margin of victory in a sporting event.

Jets bettors win Ravens win by exactly 7: It&#39;s a push, and bets are refunded

Baltimore is expected to be much better than New York, hence the big spread.

If they only win by 10, you lose $22.

Point spreads have an even tax on both sides because we expect each team to cove r the point spread about 50% of the time.

Here&#39;s how it works:

They use those ratings, plus factors like home-field advantage, rest, and injuri es, to create a point spread in advance of a scheduled game.

Most sportsbooks do not create their own lines, and simply copy the movement the y see at market-making books.
